Scott Branch School and Church

Highway 474

Lewis County, Kentucky

1. The structure was built by Roy Roe, a local carpenter, to be used as a school and church by the local rural community. The original building was 21' wide by 25' long and was a one room school until it was closed by the county in 1948.

13. In 1980 the rear addition was constructed and a front addition was added circa 1990 with the remodeled building clad in vinyl siding.

*Note: The building was surveyed even though it has undergone so many alterations it no longer retains any of its original architectural integrity it still plays an important role in the lives and memories of local residents.
